

Cheating and Examination Fraud Policy

1. Prohibited Exam Behaviors

- Looking at another student's exam paper without permission
- Communicating with other students during an exam (verbally, via text, or any other means)
- Using any notes, textbooks, or electronic devices not explicitly permitted by the instructor
- Having another person take an exam on one's behalf (contract cheating)
- Removing exam materials from the examination room without authorization
- Altering a graded exam before requesting a regrade

2. Exam Fraud and Contract Cheating

Contract cheating — paying or arranging for another person to complete academic work — is among the most severe violations of academic integrity. Students found to have engaged in contract cheating face immediate course failure and referral to the Academic Integrity Board, which may impose suspension or expulsion.

3. Consequences

First-time cheating offense: zero on the exam, mandatory academic integrity workshop, written warning. Second offense: automatic F in the course, placed on Academic Integrity Probation. Third or serious offense: suspension or expulsion, permanent notation on transcript.
