

Disciplinary Sanctions and Penalties

1. Overview

When a student is found responsible for a Code of Conduct violation, one or more of the following sanctions may be imposed. Sanctions are cumulative and escalating for repeat violations.

2. Sanction Categories

2.1 Educational Sanctions

Assigned for minor, first-time violations. Examples include written reflections, community service, completion of educational workshops, or formal written apology letters.

2.2 Conduct Probation

A formal status indicating that the student is at risk of suspension if any further violations occur. Conduct probation is typically issued for a defined period (one or two semesters). Probation status is reflected in internal student affairs records but is not noted on the academic transcript unless escalated.

2.3 Suspension

Temporary separation from the university for a specified period (minimum one semester, maximum two academic years). Suspended students may not access campus facilities, attend classes, or participate in university activities. Suspension is noted on the academic transcript during the period of suspension.

2.4 Expulsion

Permanent separation from the university. Expulsion is reserved for the most severe violations (e.g., sexual assault, violent crimes, egregious academic dishonesty with institutional impact). Expulsion is permanently noted on the academic transcript.
